3.9: Submitting a Review and Annotations

The screenshot displays the Scholar interface. At the top, the user is logged in as Yingbo Chan. The main content area shows a work titled "The Skateboard" with the following text:

As we were driving I did cry.....a lot. We got there and they got me a wheel chair and wheeled me to a room. I had x-rays done on my leg.The doctor then came in.

"Your leg is broken" he said "we will put a cast on your leg to heal and will be in the color of your choice" he added trying to cheer me up.

"How long will I have it" I said, hoping it wont be long.

"For about four weeks."

I threw my head back in defeat. No more skateboarding for a while.They had put a green cast on my leg that I had on for 4 weeks. Many people had signed it and said to get better. After I had to wear a boot that was really uncomferable but it helped it heal. To this day I am still very careful of the leg that I had broke but it is healed.

A photograph shows a person's lower leg and foot wrapped in a bright green cast.

The right sidebar, under "Works", shows "About This Work" with tabs for Project, Info, Structure, Versions, Creators, and Publish. The "Status" tab is active, showing "PROJECT STATUS" and a "Revision Awaiting Approval" message: "You have been asked to contribute feedback." Below this, it says "Review: Not Started" and "All of the requirements above must be complete to proceed. Feedback is due Jul 3, 2015 6:15 am." A "Submit Feedback" button is visible.

3.9.1: When you have finished your review of a peer’s work, make sure you have completed any other requirements such as “Annotations” and a “Publication Recommendation.” You will only be able to submit your feedback when all requirements have been completed. You submit your feedback at About This Work => Project => Status.

The screenshot shows the Scholar interface for a work by Dr. Hawa Abdi. The main content area displays a paragraph about her work, with several phrases highlighted in orange: "This woman is an extraordinary woman because of how brave and determined she has been in first setting up her clinic, hospital, school and refugee camp, and then in standing up to armed militias who wanted to destroy her camp." Below this is a photo of three women. The section is titled "Hospital and School" and contains another paragraph describing her achievements. On the right side, the "Feedback" panel is open to the "Annotations" tab, showing two annotations with comments from Richard Tate. The first annotation highlights the highlighted text, and the second highlights "Idren. A whole generation has ...".

3.9.2: As well as giving feedback through a review, you may be required to annotate the work. An annotation is a comment or a suggested change about a specific part of a work. To make an annotation go to Feedback => Annotations. Then highlight the text you wish to annotate, and click "Create Annotation."

This screenshot shows the same work by Dr. Hawa Abdi, but with a different annotation. The main text is now: "set up training for people who were nomadic to farm and fish. She has set up a school for 850 children mostly girls in grades 1-7. She said, 'Now we want to educate the children. A whole generation has been lost after 22 years. We want to fight poverty, ignorance and illiteracy.' She has established literacy and health classes for women, including programs to discourage female genital mutilation, and classes on clean water, sanitation and hygiene practices. She believes education is important so people can take control of their futures and stand on their own feet. In 2012 there were 102 workers at the camp plus 150 volunteers, fishermen and farmers. These are extraordinary achievements by a woman in a Muslim society. Dr Abdi also tries to make other women strong so they can be leaders in their communities." Below this is a photo of a classroom. The "Feedback" panel on the right shows a suggested change annotation from Rita van Haren: "Check grammar - suggestion?: This is a cliché so perhaps use become independent." The annotation highlights the phrase "stand on their own feet."

3.9.3: Select whether you want to make a comment or suggest a change. If you are suggesting a change, indicate the type of change you would like to suggest. When a creator receives feedback, they can discuss a particular comment here with the person who has made the feedback—that contributor will be anonymous or named, depending on the project settings created by the admin.
